

Decorating tips

Think paint. Painting is a quick, inexpensive way to create maximum impact. Research suggests that color can positively or negatively affect mood. For example, did you know that the color red stimulates appetites and conversation? A great option for the dining room or kitchen!

Think artwork. Let kids unleash their creativity and increase their self-confidence by having them paint a canvas for their room. Have it framed in a way that coordinates with the room's theme.

Think out-of-the-ordinary. Change the purpose of everyday items. Look carefully at ordinary items in your home and think of new and surprising uses for them. For example, in a teen's room hang colorful purses vertically to serve as both artwork and as a storage place for pens, pencils or even jewelry.

Our philosophy

Decorators Lisa Hansen and Jena McFadden have over five years of combined decorating experience and a shared passion for decorating. They believe that your home should fit your personal style, not your decorator's. Your home should be a comfortable, inviting space you want to spend time in. Although Lisa and Jena share a decorating philosophy, they have varied talents and love decorating for different reasons.

"The creative aspect of decorating is what first attracted me to the industry. I have a keen eye for space and color combinations, and a passion for faux finishing and accessories. I also try to put clients at ease and make them feel comfortable."

-Jena

"I love seeing a room come together. It's so rewarding to envision the paint, furniture and accessories, and then later see a beautiful room and a really happy client. Decorating is challenging in so many ways—I really thrive on that!"

-Lisa

"Lisa and Jena helped me find my personal decorating style and really made me feel at ease. They have different strengths and distinct styles that allow them to cater to a wide variety of decorating tastes. That's what makes Lisa and Jena a great team."
